A WAR SONG,

Written for the Royal Light Horse Volunteers of Edinburg.

BY WALTER SCOTT.

TO horse, to horse! the ſtandard flies,
Our bugles ſound the call;
The Gallic navy ſtems the ſeas,
The voice of battle's on the breeze—
Arouſe ye one and all!

From high Dunedin's towers we come,
A band of brother's true:
Our caſques the leopard's ſpoils ſurround,
With Scotland's hardy thiſtle crown'd,
We boaſt the red and blue:

Tho' tamely crouch to Gallia's frown
Dull Holland's tardy train,
Their raviſh'd toys though Romans mourn,
Tho' gallant Switzers vainly ſpurn,
And foaming gnaw the chain.

Oh! had they mark'd the avenging call
Their brethren's murder gave,
Diſunion ne'er their ranks had ſhown,
Nor patriot valor, deſperate grown,
Sought Freedom in the grave.

Shall we too bend the ſtubborn head,
In Freedom's temple born,
Dreſs our pale cheek in timid ſmile,
To hail a maſter in our iſle,
Or brook a victor's ſcorn?

No—tho' deſtruction thro' our land
Come pouring as a flood;
The ſun that ſees our falling day,
Shall mark our ſabres's deadly ſway,
And ſet that night in blood.

For gold let Gallia's legions fight,
Or plunder's bloody gain;
Unbrib'd, unbought, our ſwords we draw
To guard our king, to fence our law,
Nor ſhall their edge be vain.

If ever breath of Britiſh gale
Shall fan the tricolore,
Or footſtep of invader rude,
With rapine foul, and red with blood,
Pollute our happy ſhore;

Then farewell hope, and farewell friends;
Adieu each tender tie:
Reſolv'd we mingle in the tide,
Where charging ſquadrons furious ride,
To conquer or to die.

To horſe, to horſe! our ſabres gleam;
High ſounds our bugle call;
Combined by honor's ſacred tie,
Our word is "Laws and Liberty."
March forward, one and all!

VIENNA, August 6.

The archduke Palatine is arrived at Presburg, in return from his voyage to Petersburg. It appears that his journey was not of a political nature. Our court does not interfere at present, in a direct manner, with differences of France and England.—She is anxious that their differences should cease and that Europe should at length enjoy tranquility, after the numerous disturbances by which she has been agitated.—Perfectly satisfied with the sentiments of the Emperor Alexander, and of the principles that direct his policy, our court reposes itself entirely on that monarch: it is persuaded that his powerful, energetic and entirely disinterested, interference will suffice to re-establish peace between France and England, if the latter is not determined to sacrifice every thing to her ambition and her individual interest. We shall soon know the result of the impressive remonstrances that the court of Russia has made with this view; and if her benevolent intentions, her reiterated efforts produce not the desired effect, all Europe will know to whom is to be attributed the continuation of a war, which must bring so many misfortunes on the continent.

It will be a species of political phenomenon to see the Turks at the head of a coalition, and yet we are about to witness such an event. We know that the ex-Venetian islands have declared that they will observe the most strict neutrality during this war, and that they will be united in this view with the Porte, which has already made declarations of neutrality. It is now said that the Turkish minister has drawn up a plan of neutrality to which most of the maritime powers of the Mediterranean and Adriatic have been invited to accede, and a similar invitation will be made to our court. This union of the maritime powers of the south of Europe will form an equipoise to that of the north and the Baltic.—The Turk will be head of the one: the Russian the other.

HAMBURG, August 10.

The stagnation of our commerce becomes every day greater. Our harbour, which used to exhibit a forest of masts, a desolate waste or an African desart. No vessel is suffered to enter the Elbe, and the English will permit none to go out. This state of things may continue long: the French are determined not to relinquish the left bank of the Elbe, and the English are resolved not to raise the blockade. It is also certain that Russia will maintain her neutrality in the Baltic sea, and that the banks at Elsineur & the garrisons on that side will not be occupied by foreign troops; official dispatches have been received from Petersburg on that subject. The maritime convention of 17th June, 1801, will be strictly maintained.

They write from Bremen, under date of the 8th, that the English have effected a blockade of the Weser: they have sent back several vessels which were desirous of entering that river.

At the first audience given to the Ambassadors after Bonaparte's return, the Balli de Ferretta presented his credentials as Minister Plenipotentiary from the Order of Malta.

The Portuguese have at length gained an advantage by sea of the Algerines. The Vosee de Gama, a Portuguese ship of the line, cruising before Algiers, was attacked by three large xebecs and a forty-gun frigate which formerly belonged to the Portuguese. The Algerines attacked with their usual fury and desperation, but the Portuguese captain made so good a defence that after a fight, which lasted three hours, he sunk two of the xebecs, and captured the third, in which he had the happiness to find 200 prisoners, whom he set at liberty. The frigate, however, contrived to make her escape.

The Prince Royal of Denmark will immediately transfer his head quarters from Rendzburg to Schleswig.

During the last week, the blockade of the English fleet, owing to the heavy gales of wind, has been less strict than before. The few frigates on that station are not sufficient to shut its vast entrance from the point of Heliguland, particularly in bad weather as the ships must put to sea, for fear of being dashed against the rocks.—To blockade it more effectually, a number of cutters and light bottomed vessels seem to be absolutely necessary. From the want of these precautions, five ships from different parts safely came up the river last week, without being observed by the British.

It is reported in town that Spain has made an official declaration of war with England. We do not find mention of this in our papers, but recent Cadiz arrivals may have brought it.

LONDON, August 12.

We are happy to find that all classes and descriptions of persons in this country see the importance of the present crisis, and the necessity of lending their aid to maintain the public spirit and the national safety.—In proof of this we extract the following paragraphs from the Address of the Members of the Sixtieth Annual Conference, held at Manchester in the year 1803, to the Members of Methodist Society throughout G. Britain, particularly as this class of men have been represented as not very well affected:

Dearly Beloved Brethren in the Lord,

The present awful crisis calls aloud on your affectionate and faithful Pastors to address you, and to impart to you their thoughts concerning the conduct you should pursue in respect to the public affairs of the nation.

We are perfectly confident, Brethren, that the true spirit of loyalty possesses your breasts; and that it is a genuine principle in your souls, wrought there by the word and spirit of God. But we are also bound by strong ties of gratitude to our sovereign and his government. Our humble applications in various distressing cases relating to the prosperity of the work of God among us, have been received by our Rulers with kind attention, and have produced the happiest effects. Even very lately our government and legislature have given very striking proofs of the liberality of their sentiments. The exemptions and other clauses in the late acts of Parliament for raising the army of reserve, and for arming the nation at large, which respect the public ministers of the Gospel, and the mode of training the people to arms, are peculiarly favorable to the spiritual interests of the people of God. And through these privileges are not peculiar to the Methodists, but are extended to all the religious characters of the realm, we cannot but feel ourselves grateful to the Government for that large portion which we enjoy of the blessings which flow, and will continue to flow from this source. At the same time we acknowledge, that it is to Almighty God we are primarily indebted for all our mercies, and to him alone must be ascribed all the glory both first and last; nevertheless, our holy religion requires us to manifest all due gratitude to those secondary causes, whence these blessings visibly and immediately flow.

And now, brethren, we must earnestly and from a full conviction of the necessity of the case, beseech you to comply with the requisitions of Government with cheerfulness and alacrity, fully using your privilege in respect to the Sabbath-day.

But at the same time we charge you in the name of God, to avoid all public entertainments. Frequent not the ale-house or taverns, those nurseries of vice and immorality. To strengthen our caution, and to cause it to be remembered, we repeat it, as you love that adorable Savior, who came to save his people from their sins, have nothing to do with those places and works of darkness.

Be diligent in your respective callings, "be not sloathful in business, but fervent in spirit, serving the Lord." Avoid all unnecessary expences, that you may have wherewith to communicate to him that needeth, and thereby lay up a good foundation against the time to come.

But above all put your trust in God.—Look unto Jesus, who is head over all this for the Church, which is his Body. He has declared by his apostle, "that all things work together for good to them that love him." He is our anchor of hope; let us cast it within the vail. Let us not dishonour him by doubting for a moment his power or love, or willingness to save us. To his holy keeping we recommend you. We shall daily in our prayers bear you up before the throne of grace. Pray also for us. And the God of peace and love be ever with you.

Signed in behalf and by order of the Conference,

JOSEPH BRADFORD, President.
THOMAS COKE, Secretary.

NORFOLK, October 4.

We learn by capt. Muir, from Cape Francois, that a plot was discovered there a few days before his departure, which had for its object the seizure and death of the commander in chief (gen. Rochambeau) and the Prefect. The second in command, gen. Clausel, and the chief of the staff, Thouvenot, together with upwards of 40 others, have been put on board a frigate in the harbour; the two cooks of the commander in chief and prefect have been hanged. Fort Dauphin was stormed and taken on the 8th ult. by the Brigands. A proclamation has been issued ordering the immediate imprisonment of the English found at the Cape, which was carried into execution on such as could be found, and their property seized.

The lateſt from Europe.

On Thursday 29th ult. arrived at Boston, the brig Calista, Captain Atkins, 24 days from Plymouth, Eng. Captain Atkins brings London papers to Aug. 24 inclusive. The preparations for the attack of England continued in the ports of France and Holland. An English gentleman returned from France, stated that the gun-boats were to be completed by the latter end of October, and the expedition was to proceed in November. Several persons, suspected of being French spies, have been arrested in England. Rumours of conspiracies of Royalists in France prevailed. It is even said that Talleyrand has been suspected of designs unfavorable to the first consul.

Ireland continues tranquil. There had been a few additional arrests; among them, a Mr. Long, a merchant of Dublin.

LONDON, Aug. 20.

The Russian squadron of 12 sail of the line, which lately sailed from Russian ports, will certainly winter in our harbors. The necessary orders for the accommodation have been given.

Sir Home Popham has been appointed to the chief command of a secret expedition. Some gun boats have been ordered to be immediately prepared.

August 22.

Our readers could not fail to observe in the late extracts from the French papers, a kind of complaint "that the correspondence between the Emperor of Russia and the King of Prussia was carried on without the medium of their ministers, by letters written with their own hand;" nor can our readers have forgotten a circumstance that made much noise, not a long time ago, of some dispatches having been kept from the knowledge of a certain potentate, for a longer time than any good reason could be assigned for. Whether the Machiavelian policy that rendered it unnecessary for the Emperor and the King of Prussia to manage their own correspondence, could be laid to our charge or that of France, need not, we think, be doubted; nor consequently which of us is to be served by it.

The view we are decidedly inclined to take is farther corroborated by private letters received yesterday from St. Petersburg, which state, that a nest of French spies and agents, detected in corrupt practices there, have been seized and sent into Siberia.

August 24.

A Council was held yesterday on dispatches from the continent. It is reported the mediation offered by Russia has entirely failed. The final proposition of the Emperor was, that France should withdraw her troops from Holland and Hanover, and that Malta should remain 10 years in our hands. The proposal, it is said, was cooly received by both the belligerent powers. His Imperial Majesty has since caused it to be signified to France that unless the French troops are withdrawn from Hanover, he will find himself under the necessity of adopting compulsory means, in conjunction with the powers most immediately interested.

A few days since a council of the seven French Princes was held. Pichegru and Dumourier were present. With a view to an expedition the latter has certainly come to this country. The Royal Standard is to be erected in France, under these generals, accompanied by some of the Princes.

Extract of a letter from a Gentleman in Birmingham to his friend in Philadelphia, dated Auguſt 4, 1803.

We have now to enter upon an unpleasant task, viz. to apprise you of an addition of 3 per cent. to the export duty; this circumstance which our good friends on your side the water cannot possibly regret more than ourselves, takes its rise in our being again engaged in War with an ambitious neighbour—the present ruler of France. It is a warfare indeed in which we have been obliged to embark in defence of our dearest rights, said little Gentleman having threatened us with invasion, and as inducement to his troops to make the attempt, has promised them the plunder of the whole country, and that they shall take up their winter quarters in our rich and extended capital—and altho' under Providence we treat his threats with deserved contempt, we are still preparing in all possible ways to meet the event, and in less than one month from this time, we shall have in arms (independent of regulars and a large militia) more than 500,000 volunteers of every rank and description; in fact we shall become a country of soldiers, regularly disciplined to meet the awful contest, should it please the ruler of armies to permit it.

An Engliſh writer, on the ſubject of commerce, ſays, "It is a very ſerious queſtion, whether we ought to take the French, Dutch and Spaniſh colonies, to be given up in a flouriſhing ſtate at a peace, after abſorbing ſo much Britiſh capital in their cultivation and government, and conſidering the thouſands of our moſt promiſing countrymen to whom they prove a grave. It would, perhaps, be better to receive their produce, offering neutrality to all theſe colonies in the intercourſe with our islands, but affording them no other ſpecies of neutrality, and holding them blockaded in every other ſenſe.

"Thus, we would preserve our capital for our own poſſeſſions, which would be the medium of the ſupply and communication, with those colonies; and the expence of the latter would be saved as well as the lives of troops and settlers."

WHAT a ſad ſtate muſt the country be in which would give way to the wiſhes and deſigns of modern democrats. They hold nothing to be right that has gone before them; and as for futurity, they leave it to ſtruggle for itſelf. All they deſire is, that the people will believe them and them alone to be good; them and them alone to be wiſe, and all their actions, plans and projects to be the best in the world. Thus they would make every man dependent for his judgement wholly upon the experience of the day, which even while it is paſſing over him is loſt in ignorance and error, and commits the deluded being to the next in blindneſs and inexperience. These reflections lead to the recollection of a ſtory which we have ſomewhere met with of an Egyptian Prieſt, who having a conference with Solon the wiſe ſaid to him, "You Grecians are ever Children, you have no knowledge of antiquity, nor antiquity of knowledge." (Courier.)

A Major M'Willis, of Maryland, was taken as a priſoner through this town on Saturday laſt, it appears he ſold a number of negroes in the neighborhood of Danville and after having been paid, ſtole two of them, (women) whom he appareled in men's clothing. Take brandy or common ſpirits two ounces, caſtile ſoap two drachms, pot aſh one drachm; ſcrape the ſoap fine and diſſolve it in the brandy, then add the pot aſh and mix it well together, and keep it cloſe in a phial—when you apply it, warm it in a veſſel and dip pledges of lint in it, and the blood will immediately congeal upon the application. It operates by coagulating the blood, both a conſiderable way within the veſſels, as well as the extravaſated blood, reſtraining at the ſame time the mouths of the veſſels. A CARICATURE.

Qui capi, ille facit.

SOME fretful tempers wince at every touch,
You always do too little or too much;
You ſpeak with life, in hopes to entertain,
Your elevated voice goes through the brain
You fall at once into a lower key,
That's worſe—the drone pipe of a humble-bee.
The ſouthern ſash admits too ſtrong a light,
You riſe and drop the curtain—now it's night.
He ſhakes with cold—you ſtir the fire, and ſtrive
To make a blaze—that's roaſting him alive.
Serve him with veniſon, and he chooſes fiſh;
With ſoal—that's juſt the ſort he would not wiſh.
He takes what he at firſt profeſs'd to loath,
And in due time feeds heartily on both;
Yet ſtill o'er clouded with a conſtant frown,
He does not ſwallow, but he gulps it down.
You hope to please him, vain on ev'ry plan,
Himſelf ſhould work that wonder if he can—
Alas! his efforts double his diſtreſs,
He likes your leſs, little and his own ſtill,
Thus always teazing others always teas'd
His only pleaſure is—to be diſpleas'd.

For the Alexandria Daily Advertiesr.

To THOMAS JEFFERSON, Preſident of the United States.

SIR,

DURING the laſt ſitting of Congreſs, and often times ſince, the public have read and heard much of your ſcheme for preſerving veſſels of war, now lying in the river Potomac.

I was among thoſe of your fellow citizens who were anxious for the preſervation of ſuch expenſive, though at the preſent moment, uſeleſs machines for national protection, and I endeavoured to underſtand your famous plan of making Dry Docks; but finding the propoſed advantage to be derived therefrom, to exceed the limits of my poor capacity, I gave up the idea; tho' I never think of the ſufferers without lamenting the neglect ſhewn them. An obſervation, which I have often heard repeated, at this moment occurring, I cannot reſiſt the temptation of here uſing it—"never to condemn the ſpeculations of others unleſs you can offer a ſubſtitute."

Though I am conſcious that I ſhall be charged with vanity by ſome of our fellow citizens, and by others with temerity, in addreſſing you on this very delicate ſubject; yet, Sir, as a wary general will not have too contemptable an opinion of his enemy, ſo you, perhaps, may not be provoked to turn aſide the page, that may have uſed the freedom of addreſſing you. Many wonderful diſcoveries have been made, unſought for, and a fool may yet diſcover the philoſopher's ſtone.

To return then, to the ſubject of preſerving the Wooden Walls of America from tumbling to pieces, I would adopt the plan of covering the bottoms with a compoſition which would repel the worm, and preſerve the plank from decay. This compoſition has been already tried in Europe, and no doubt entertained of its fully anſwering the end propoſed.

It conſiſts in collecting a quantity of mundick and pyrites, containing ſulpher, copper or iron, zinc and arſenic. With theſe materials a common ſulphur kiln is to be charged, and a gentle heat to be applied: part of the ſulpher, and the zinc and arſenic, in the the ſtate of oxide, will riſe together into the receiver, in the form of a bright yellow ſublimate, which conſtitutes the baſis of the new paint. The remainder, conſiſting of iron or copper, with a portion of ſulpher, is to be waſhed in warm water, and the water ſet to evaporate by the heat of the ſun, or in a trough upon the kiln: when this liquor is thus brought to a degree of concentration, cryſtals will be depoſited of green and blue vitriol.

As an experiment of this kind, would be attended with, perhaps, the ten thouſanth part of the trouble and expence of making Dry Docks, I humbly tender it to your conſideration.

J.

Alex. Sept. 7.

From the New-Haven Visitor.

We are told by our democrats of ſagacious phiz a mighty deal of ſtuff about national philanthropy, national kindneſſes, &c. &c. and of the generous friendſhip of Frenchmen and enmity of Britons towards our country. Whether theſe diſcerning creatures who ſo eaſily embrace the univerſe in the ſcope of their conceptions, believe a ſyllable of the jargon they utter, is foreign to the purpoſe of theſe remarks. Certain it is, were it not for the miſchiefs their ſilly notions have already done, and may yet do, to our national character, they would be infinitely below the range of contempt. To talk about the friendſhip; the fraternal ſympathies of nations, is moſt pitiable indeed! and as for all the acts or profeſſions of this ſort, ſuch, for example, with which Frenchmen have beſlavered us during their revolutionary phrenzy, why they are worth juſt as much as ſo many acres of cloud. Never was there a nation, and I undertake to ſay, never will there be a nation, which, in its policy towards another, has been, or will hereafter be, governed by any other friendſhip but intereſt. France, while we were ſtruggling for our rights, found it was her intereſt to join us in humbling her old enemy; accordingly, we had her friendſhip in our revolution. At the cloſe of it, ſhe thought her intereſt adviſed that all the weſtern countries the fiſheries, and the acknowledgement of our independence by England, ought to be withheld from us leſt we ſhould not be ſuffiently dependent on herſelf; of courſe, her friendſhip put in motion every engine of intrigue to prevent each and all of theſe events; it is owing to nothing elſe but the firmneſs, and indefatigable vigilance of Adams and Jay, (negociators of the treaty) that we now poſſeſs them.

Again, at the commencement of her late democratic career, France thought her intereſt would be profited by drilling us into the ſervice of her quarrels; and conſequently, no muſic but the notes of "ſweet ſenſibility"* was liſped by her miſcreants throughout the continent; till at length, finding her meretricious embraces were not ſought for with the eagerneſs ſhe expected, her ladyſhip took it in high dudgeon, and inſtantly, both her Intereſt and her Friendſhip turned freebooters upon our commerce, to the very ſolemn dirge of twenty millions of dollars!

As for the Engliſh, their gracious acts are neither better nor worſe than thoſe of other nations. They, indeed, have not the art of prating nonſenſe quite ſo ready at their finger ends, and of courſe are not ſo dangerous to fools, as their neighbors the French; but ſelf intereſts ſelf aggrandiſement is preciſely the ſame governing principle with both, as it is with every community under heaven.

There is nothing ſo pitiful as this miſerable cant, and yet, it would ſeem we were doomed once more to become its dupes. The renegade Iriſhman, who conducts the Aurora, with a horde of ſubalterns at his heels, are endeavoring again to wake the ghoſt of French friendſhip; and ten to one but their endeavors prove fatally ſucceſsful. No man however, who poſſeſſes diſcernment, and who cares a cent about the honor of his country, but will hold theſe attempts at diſgracing it, and their authors, as the moſt abominable peſts of ſociety. The editor of the National Ægis, a democrat, but an American, has, indignantly entered his proteſt againſt them; and the whole kennel, as was to be expected, are in full cry to deſtroy him.

The reader will find under our head of intelligence, that new orders have lately been iſſued by the Britiſh council of ſtate, whereby the commerce of neutrals is to be treated with more reſpect than heretofore. This decree, no doubt, has reference, particularly to this country; as the advantages we ſhall derive from it are far greater than any other neutral power. But, whoever would thence infer that we are peculiarly the favorites of England, or thinks this a proof of any thing like friendſhip, other than that ſort which treats us well because our preſent amity is eſſential to its welfare—he who thus pretends may poſſibly not deſerve execration for his treachery, but will aſſuredly be pitied for his ignorance.

To conclude, I again aſſert, that of all abſurd and wretched things, there is ſcarce one more wretched, or which, for its conſequences, ought to be more ſeverely reprobated by every man, than this ſame doctrine about national friendſhip.

* See Citizen Adet's love epiſtle to congreſs on preſenting the tri-colored flag of his nation to that body.

Stoughton's Bitters.

☞ During the present sickly season, the use of STOUGHTON'S BITTERS, (imported from London) will be found of great service, as preventive to disease, especially where there is an infectious atmosphere and a predisposition in the habit to contagion. It eminently braces the constitution, and renovates the whole system. It may be used instead of spirits in water, tea, or other drink. It restores lost apperite, expels worms in children, and, if regularly used during the fall season, will prevent the ague and fever. In short, it only needs to be tried, to convince every one of its great efficacy.

These Bitters may be had, with copious directions, (prepared at the original warehouse in London) in quart bottles at one fourth of the former charge for the same in vials, at R. and J. GRAY's book store, Alexandria, where a bottle is constantly kept open for trial. ☞ Also, at A. BUCK's, Fredericksburg.
